

I. Islamic Fundamentalism or American Imperialism - What is Ideological about this Choice?

When we are asked, in the end, what will you support? America or the Arab world with all its contradictions and far right processes of dictatorship and now even terrorism, there is no doubt the official stance, we defend the American war but in fact this ideological process of mystification includes how America is structured with capitalism, drives towards their own private and particular interests, and a global capitalist process going out of hand with Hindutva in India, which of course merges American globalized capitalism with its own fundamentalism of now it seems appearing to be the next winner of elections against the liberal Congress after the decline of Indian Communism.

Then of course the main tensions of our world range from America losing the process of global hegemon, even as China is in crisis and supported by capitalists as the miracle of combining post-politics with Special Economic Zones imposed by American capital which is now Modi's model in Gujarat and is then the process of the elementary structure of private capitalist companies or corporations in Chomsky's sense which then are in crisis after financial recession in 2008, now as I write this journalistic document in 2010. I am told that Sirohi, is a young philosopher in India, who works with Saroj Giri, and his argument is "Can you see a shift to post-politics?" which is how he addresses us though he has only just met Giri. He is certain that the new ideas of capitalist technology are shifting us towards what he calls comprador capitalism in Mexico and India, which then means Bauxite will be mined from tribal areas, and this then is the ideological mystification involved in global capitalism.

II. Greek Debt Crisis Developing in the World of Europe

Like that I see a new crisis, Sirohi argues that there is a cycle of debt crises from sub-prime mortgage housing crisis in America, to student debt crises developing there including a new logic of global capitalism called governance by debt according to Maurizio Lazzarato who then articulated to in 2014, I am writing this, according to Sirohi the very logic of global capitalism shifting from transparent debt as Yanis Varoufakis argues about the World Bank era, to the now problem of debt as crisis or debt as monetarism, which then means that the logic of Indian fascism now in power with Modi has shifted the logic of capitalism towards its own government money becoming debt towards the financialisation of the economy and this then means "The Making of the Indebted Man" as Lazzarato argues which is how across global capitalism all people are falling into debt relations such as the housing debt I myself am in, alongside the global debt crisis developing in Greece for the same reasons.

III. Global Village and its Discontents

Like that Prophet Mohammad was joked about in Denmark and it became a row in India and the Arab world, which then is Sunni Islamists who are contradicting the joke as well as Salman Rushdie's work on the Quran, which then constellates to newer problems in our global village such as drug cartels becoming prominent in Mexico, the process of immigration and linked problems for the Arab people all a crisis in global village when cell phone numbers are shared with random far right people as the new process of war machines according to Sergio Rodriguez Gonzales, who is arguing that the global village is a set of ideological features of for instance debt crises, and linked spatial fixes of these type European crises and even Japanese and American, Indian crises all being a set of crises in the global economic system which is going out of control in the standard sense of immigration crises all of which are as I am arguing the problem called "Children of Men" in the new blockbuster by Alfonso Cuarón, everything from ecological crises to refugee problems summed up as the future of our current world.

IV. Visit to India, the commencement of Maoism in India

I am now finally in communication directly I mean with the young Sirohi. He argues that the world is filled with tensions of what he calls the Idea of capitalism being wordless and even late capitalist with excessive types of crises and this then is Living in the End Times, and he argues that a power structural shift has taken place around the world to lock in place in India the far right Hindutva.

I mean of course that we will win, I am sure based on my analysis of how Ayurvedic cigarette therapy seems to be the idea of capitalism according to Sirohi, not just a chocolate laxative structure, something like how the falsification of the standard commodity structure of cigarette nicotine leaving (intuitive), is now paraconsistent in Vedanta corporation which then is comprador capitalism developing in India attacking the poorest.

Maoism is of course an urban process of students and intellectuals supporting what they argue is a Communist Party of Maoists in the tribal regions, which is actually only the poorest being hounded by the armed forces.
